

PODCASTS

10 FEBRUARY 2021

The commodities sector is rich, of strategic national interest, at the center of geopolitics, and environmentally impactful. Thus, it is a focal target for cyber-attacks from criminals, national actors, hacktivists and others. As the sector digitizes, the threat and potential risks are only increasing. The threat posed and the responses required is a board level conversation for many companies - and our guest, Simon Hodgkinson, the former Group Chief Information Security Officer for BP, gives ample insight into why that should change.

The HC Insider Podcast

Each day, around the world, we have fascinating one-on-one conversations with our connections. Our collaborators are uniquely informed, creative and inspirational in their fields. We want to provide our community a seat alongside us, listening in to these conversations in that special way podcasting provides, as we tackle topical and people related issues with the leaders and leading minds in our sector.

This article was produced as part of HC Insider. HC Insider is Human Capital's dedicated media service. In addition to providing subscribers with relevant and informative editorials, we also report on people moves in the energy and natural resource world.

To receive free HC Insider alerts to your desktop or mobile, sign up here.

About Human Capital

Established in 2003, Human Capital identifies and recruits business-critical talent for organisations involved in the energy, mining, agriculture and nutrition supply chains.

From our offices in London, Geneva, Houston, Hong Kong, Singapore, São Paulo and Sydney, we have built our high reputation on delivering quality professional search services across multiple product, functional and regional markets.