

PODCASTS

02 SEPTEMBER 2020

Robert Johnston, MD of Energy, Climate and Resources, of the Eurasia Group, a global political risk consultancy, joins us to discuss the upcoming US election.

Far from being just a domestic US affair, this election promises to be one of the most consequential for the global energy and commodities sector in decades, given the stark differences between the two contending platforms. Robert gives us his insight on what those differences are and the consequences for markets and businesses operating in the US and around the world.

The HC Insider Podcast

Each day, around the world, we have fascinating one-on-one conversations with our connections. Our collaborators are uniquely informed, creative and inspirational in their fields. We want to provide our community a seat alongside us, listening in to these conversations in that special way podcasting provides, as we tackle topical and people related issues with the leaders and leading minds in our sector.

This article was produced as part of HC Insider. HC Insider is Human Capital's dedicated media service. In addition to providing subscribers with relevant and informative editorials, we also report on people moves in the energy and natural resource world.

To receive free HC Insider alerts to your desktop or mobile, sign up here.

About Human Capital

Established in 2003, Human Capital identifies and recruits business-critical talent for organisations involved in the energy, mining, agriculture and nutrition supply chains.

From our offices in London, Geneva, Houston, Hong Kong, Singapore, São Paulo and Sydney, we have built our high reputation on delivering quality professional search services across multiple product, functional and regional markets.